

Up to $20,000 to Complete Home Adaptations for Accessibility

The BC RAHA (Rebate for Accessible Home Adaptations) Program helps seniors and people with disabilities or diminished ability gain greater independence within their homes. Eligible low- and moderate-income households can receive up to $20,000 to complete home adaptations for accessibility.

The program supports possible home adaptations such as exterior and interior ramps, and door widening to accommodate a wheelchair. It could also include bathroom modifications, such as grab bars, shower seats and handheld showerheads.

Some adaptation require an assessment by an occupational therapists or other qualified professional. This ensures the adaptations appropriately support the needs of seniors and people with disabilities.

To be eligible, you must be a British Columbia resident with limited income and assets. You or someone in your household must have a permanent disability or loss of ability. The adaptations requested must support accessibility and promote continued safe and independent living. Applications are available on the website, by mail, or at any BC Housing office.

To apply, visit <http://bchousing.org/bc-raha> to download the application forms.

Need adaptations to increase safety and accessibility?
Up to $20,000 in rebates for adaptations to your home.
bchousing.org/BC-RAHA

